

Australian Government
Department of Home Affairs

HARMONY WEEK

Online Promotion Kit for Workplaces

Spread the word—promoting your Harmony Week event online and on social media

Using social media and online channels can be a simple, but effective way, to let your staff, partners and/or networks know about your Harmony Week event and how they can get involved.

This kit contains some simple ways you can promote your Harmony Week event online and through social media.

For further information on Harmony Week events for workplaces, including ideas for what your business could do on Harmony Week and resources to help you celebrate, check out our Event Planning Kit for Workplaces.

Contents

Get the word out on your website.....	3
Pop our Harmony Week web badge on your website.....	3
Create a Harmony Week event or cultural diversity section on your homepage, or a new page for your website or intranet	3
Spread the word using emails, newsletters and communications with your networks.....	3
Add the Harmony Week signature block to your workplace emails.....	3
Include information about your Harmony Week event in your newsletters	3
Let all your networks, partners, customers and clients know about your event.....	4
Get social—use social media to promote your workplace’s Harmony Week event.....	4
Use hashtags to brand your event.....	4
Get more people to join the fun—encourage attendance using Facebook events	4
Use Harmony Week infographics	5
Use the Harmony Week Facebook cover.....	5
Use Harmony Week instaframes.....	5
Connect with us.....	6

Get the word out on your website

Your website is a great place to start promoting Harmony Week and your event. Here are some simple resources with explanations of how to use them.

Pop our Harmony Week web badge on your website

A web badge is a small image on a website that links to another website or content. The Harmony Week web badge has been developed as a simple way for you to promote your event on your website.

To add the Harmony Week badge to your website, right click, 'save as' on the image and upload it to your website.

Make sure to link the image back to <http://www.harmony.gov.au>.

Create a Harmony Week event or cultural diversity section on your homepage, or a new page for your website or intranet

You may like to dedicate an area of your homepage, or a specific page of your website, to telling people about your Harmony Week event or, more broadly, your workplace's cultural diversity.

If you have an intranet, this is a great place to include information about Harmony Week and your planned event to get all of your staff on board.

We've developed a range of Harmony Week graphics for you to use on your website or intranet.

Web banners are easy to use content and/or images that can be used on websites to promote events. You can use the Harmony Week web banners on your website in a variety of ways and on a variety of pages. We've provided large, horizontal and vertical banners that will fit with the layout of your website.

Spread the word using emails, newsletters and communications with your networks

Add the Harmony Week signature block to your workplace emails

Add the signature block to your staff's email signatures, along with a few words about your event's date and location. For example: 'Join us at head office and celebrate our workplace's diversity' or 'We're proud of our diversity with XX countries represented in our workforce'.

Include information about your Harmony Week event in your newsletters

Share updates about your event in your newsletters. You can use the graphics we've provided on our website alongside anything from a few words to a longer article about your event or the staff involved.

See the Event Planning Kit for Workplaces for some key messages to include.

Let all your networks, partners, customers and clients know about your event

Include information on your event in all your communication with clients and other businesses. Add the graphics we've provided to letters, mailouts and online communication to show your commitment to diversity.

Get social—use social media to promote your workplace's Harmony Week event

You can use Facebook, Instagram and Twitter to let your staff, partners and networks know about your Harmony Week event.

Don't be worried about regularly promoting your event through your social media networking circle, as it's normal to provide frequent posts about events of this kind. With all the noise and continuous stream of updates on sites like Facebook and Twitter, it's good to put out reminders regularly to catch those that may have missed your previous updates.

A good plan might be to send out content every second week, and then every week in the month leading up to your event.

Use hashtags to brand your event

If you're promoting your event through Twitter or Instagram brand it with a hashtag.

Hashtags are typically a word preceded by a # sign and can be used to unify posts from multiple people on the same subject. Brand all posts about your event with the same hashtag (we recommend using #harmonyday and #everyonebelongs) and encourage your staff and networks to do the same when they mention your event in their own updates.

Get more people to join the fun—encourage attendance using Facebook events

Create an event on your workplace's Facebook page and invite all your Facebook followers to the event. Facebook events is a feature that lets you organise gatherings, respond to invites and easily keep up with RSVPs.

Note: this should only be used if the event is open to public attendance

Use Harmony Week infographics

A simple way to promote your event through Instagram and Facebook is to combine one of the infographics we've provided with a short caption or some text about your event.

See the Event Planning Kit for Workplaces for some suggested social media posts. We've developed versions of the images below pre-sized for both Instagram and Facebook.

Use the Harmony Week Facebook cover

For those using Facebook, we've also developed a Facebook cover that you can download and use as your cover image in the lead-up to Harmony Day.

Use Harmony Week instaframes

You can also promote diversity within your organisation and build interest in your event through social media by using our colourful Harmony Week instaframes.

An instaframe is a frame which can be used to house a variety of images for sharing online or through social media. You can use an instaframe digitally, or print out a physical frame and get people to pose for photos inside it.

Our simple digital Harmony Week instaframe is perfect for framing photos of your workplace and your staff. Simply download the frame and open it in your chosen photo editor. Then paste your image neatly inside the frame (you might need to crop or resize your image to make it fit).

We also have a printable version of the simple instaframe available that you can have printed by a local printer. The frame can be used around your workplace to promote your Harmony Week event, and the images will be perfect to promote through social media (and on your website and in your newsletters).

You could also run a competition for the best or most creative images, and display the award winners and entrants during Harmony Week, as well as sharing the outcomes of the competition through social media. Remember to share all of your instaframe images on your favourite social media channels using #harmonyday and #everyonebelongs, in your newsletter or on your website – we can't wait to see your pics!

Connect with us

We are also on social media!

You can connect with us on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram. We love seeing how you are promoting and celebrating the week so make sure you also share photos with us, or tag us in your posts and use #harmonyweek and #everyonebelongs.

You might even get some great ideas from other people by searching #harmonyweek and #everyonebelongs.

Finally, remember to register your Harmony Week event with us at harmony.gov.au to receive free promotional products to help you celebrate – get in quick before the free products run out!

